

Sinclair Broadcast Group's recent decision to use the public airwaves to promote anti-Kerry propaganda is utterly disgusting. Michael Powell's complacency in this and other matters proves to me that he is not deserving of his post and should be removed as soon as possible.

If Sinclair is bold enough to do what they are doing today, how are the people to believe that they have not been or will not become promoters of their owners' political agenda in many more subtle ways over time? Who is going to police them -- The FCC?

Michael Powell's and the FCC's decisions have favored the furthering of governance of the many by the few. They have increased the imbalance in American media responsibility to the people in favor of the corporate stewards. Those of us who see this have been lazy about fighting it in the past. So I'd like to thank Sinclair for their cockiness, that it might serve as a call to arms for the reform of the FCC, starting with the removal Michael Powell.

Very Sincerely,

Jeffrey R. Sparks
